License Court on Friday.

On Friday, Jan. 10, the regular annual license court will be held for passing upon applications for license to be allowed to sell liquor. There are no new applications and one less than the usual number of applications, the Railroad House, Abbottstown, dropping out. Remonstrances have been filed against two of the applications. Several hundred residents of Bendersville, and Menallen township, have filed four remonstrances against granting a license to George B. Hoover at the Elk Horn Hotel, Bendersville.

The remonstrance is in four parts, each of which is identical except for the signatures. There is a remonstrance from the men of Bendersville, and from the women of that town, and from the men and women of Menallen township. Thirty-nine men of Bendersville signed the petition and a number of women, while the papers from Menallen township are signed by two long lists of names, including the most prominent residents of that section.

In the remonstrance it is alleged that the granting of the license is not necessary for the accommodation and entertainment of travelers and strangers; that Hoover is not a fit person and not qualified as a person to whom such license should be granted. It is also claimed that he has refused travelers such accommodation as might be expected of a hotel, and that for these "as well as many other reasons" the license should not be granted.

Remonstrances have been filed, twenty-two white and seven colored citizens, in neighborhood of Wabash Hotel, Gettysburg, against granting of license to William H. Broom, for the said hotel. The remonstrances state that objections are not against the place sought to be licensed, but against the applicant and to his fitness to have license granted to him.

"Liquors have been furnished to men in conveyances," says the remonstrance, "and on horseback in the alley from the bar room door and windows and are drunk in full public view and often by individuals in intoxicated condition. This furnishing and exhibition prevents the landlord from having such oversight of the use made of liquors sold at his place as the law contemplates."

"The hotel, during the tenancy of the present applicant, has had a large trade among the white and colored people of the town, specially on Saturday nights. This trade in going to and from this place of business is often noisy and unseemly exhibitions of conduct and language are frequent, congregating on pavements on Baltimore and High streets, obstructing the passage, engaging in loud, boisterous, often improper and indecent language, and this both from males and females who have frequented the place, and the applicant has never made any known attempt to prevent such disturbances of the public peace on the thoroughfares of the town."

"The conducting of this hotel as a drinking resort for the white and colored population has done great harm to many of the white and colored citizens and for the good of these citizens and the community this hotel should be conducted on different lines."

He had been working in the quarry for the Bittinger Lime Co., and the tavern was quite too convenient for him. ## Write Ideas for Moving Picture Plays!

YOU CAN WRITE PHOTO PLAYS AND EARN $25.00 OR MORE WEEKLY

We Will Show You How!

If you have ideas—if you can THINK—we will show you the secrets of this fascinating new profession. Positively no experience or literary excellence necessary. No “flowery language” is wanted.

The demand for photoplays is practically unlimited. The big film manufacturers are “moving heaven and earth” in their attempts to get enough good plots to supply the ever increasing demand. They are offering $100, and more, for single scenarios, or written ideas.

Nearly all the big film companies, the buyers of photoplays, are located in or near NEW YORK CITY. Being right on the spot, and knowing at all times just what sort of plots are wanted by the producers, our SALES DEPARTMENT has a tremendous advantage over agencies situated in distant cities.

We have received many letters from the big film manufacturers, such as VITAGRAPH, EDISON, ESSANAY, LUBIN, SOLAX, IMP, REX, RELIANCE, CHAMPION, COMET, MELIES, ETC., urging us to send photoplays to them. We want more writers and we'll gladly teach you the secrets of success.

We are selling photoplays written by people who “never before wrote a line for publication”

Perhaps we can do the same for you. If you can think of only one good idea every week, and will write it out as directed by us, and it sells for only $25, a low figure,

You Will Earn $100 Monthly For Spare Time Work

Nature's laws are perfect; but disease follows if these laws are not obeyed. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries here that we can fathom for you. ### Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this pure glyceric extract and alternative of the greatest efficiency and without the use of a particle of alcohol.

Just the sort of remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of Public Approval and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic.

E. WILLIAMS, JR.

"Some time ago I got out of health—my stomach seemed to be the seat of the trouble," writes Mr. EZRA WILLIAMS, of Belleville, Kans. "I commenced to doctor with all the doctors at home as well as with other specialists on stomach and digestive organs. None seemed to do any good—in fact, most of the medicines did me harm. Finally, I wrote to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., who replied, stating that I had liver complaint with indigestion and constipation, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

"The 'Discovery' and 'Pellets' have put me on my feet again," seemed to be just what I needed. I could not have recovered without them."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for liver ills.

READ THE COMPILER

A Joke Was No Joke With Him.

Men who purchase country weekly newspapers not infrequently have a desire to roll up their sleeves and do the work. Such a man, a Scotchman, was recently mentioned by E. W. Miller of Ottawa, Ill., when a crowd of writers were relating experiences they had had. This man, according to Mr. Miller, turned to the managing editor—who went down to the editorial room at 8 o'clock every morning, by the way, wrote out the assignments for the day and then went out to cover them—and said he had noticed a column of "wee bit jokes" in other papers and thought it would be well if his new paper carried such a column. "But where," he asked, "can I get a man to write 'em?"

The managing editor suggested that the owner, being Scotch, write such a column himself.

"Ah," said the owner, "I ken I'm a bit brisk o' the pen. I can write up the wee bit birth notices and the wee bit deaths and the wee bit marriages, but the wee bit joke—mon, tho'ta' diff'rent. I can write bonny, but I joke wi' great deeficulty!"—New York Tribune.

With Apologies of the Fraternity.

Sir John Ashley had a curious habit of speaking about himself as "Ashley" and blending the third person singular with the first person in the most unusual way. This is how he used to relate what happened:

"Ashley went to the Derby, and I'm blessed if Ashley's tucker wasn't stolen from him. As it had been given me and I prized it, I went to the head pickpocket, with whom I was acquainted, and said, 'See here; they've taken Ashley's tucker.' The man blushed. 'Good Lord! You don't mean it, Sir John?' he stammered. 'Will you 'ave the goodness to just wait 'ere? I'll be back in a jiffy.' He was back in three minutes with Ashley's tucker, which he handed over, saying most humbly as he did so: 'I 'ope, Sir John, you'll accept the apologies of the 'ole fraternity. It was quite a mistake, and it was done by a noo beginner.'"—Westminster Gazette.

Bismarck Forgave.

Bismarck could forgive, but he wished to do it after proper solicitation. At the beginning of the Danish war Field Marshal Wrangle, who was at the head of the Prussian troops, was exceedingly annoyed at one point to be telegraphed not to advance farther, and he returned a message telling King William that "these diplomatists who spoil the most successful operations deserve the gallows." After that Bismarck ignored him completely, and one day they met at the king's table, where it was especially awkward to preserve a coldness. Wrangle called everybody "du," and presently he turned to Bismarck, who was seated next him, and said, "My son, canst thou not forget?" "No," was the curt reply. After a pause Wrangle began again, "My son, canst thou not forgive?" "With all my heart," said Bismarck, and the breach was healed.

Doctors and Mustaches.

English doctors who grew mustaches once ran the risk of spoiling their practice. G. W. E. Russell in "One Look Back" remarks: "Quite certainly the first time I ever fell into the hands of a mustached doctor was in 1877. Every one condemned the hirsute appendage as highly unprofessional, and when soon after the poor man found his way into a lunatic asylum neighboring doctors of the old school said they were not surprised—that there was a bad family history and that he himself had shown signs of eccentricity. That meant the mustache and nothing else."

"Conspicuous by Absence."

Tacitus, the great Roman historian, was the originator of the phrase. "Conspicuous by his absence," when, describing the funeral of Junia in his "Annales," he said the images of her famous kinsmen, Brutus and Cassius, shone by their absence. Lord John Russell popularized the phrase in England in 1859 by saying of Lord Derby's reform bill, "One provision is conspicuous by its presence, another by its absence."

Eye of a Horse.

The appearance of "white" in the eye of a horse indicates a vicious nature, because a high tempered horse constantly looks about apprehensive of danger or desiring to do mischief. The quick motion of the eyelid in opposite directions exposes an unusually large surface of the white, which thus becomes an evidence of the temper of the animal.

Canaries.

Canaries are instinctively the most cleanly of all pets. They never drink from their bathing tub if provided with a filled drinking cup and unless they have been frightened by children, or too cold water will bathe every day.—Woman's Home Companion.

Sea of Galilee.

The sea of Galilee, which is 500 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, is fast becoming like the Dead sea, with dense water and salt formations on its banks. It is conjectured that the head of the sea is sinking and that greater changes in it are impending.

One Thing They Took.

"Thurgers took into our house last night."

"That so? Did they get anything?" "Nothing except my husband's nerve!"—Detroit Free Press.

That only is a disgrace to a man which he has deserved to suffer. Phedrus.

THE JANUARY MAGAZINES

INTERESTING ARTICLE ON THE CARE OF FANCY CHICKENS.

62 Per Cent of Prisoners Serving in Oregon State Penitentiary are Out "On Honor."

How to Make a Chicken Have Long Legs.

In the current issue of FARM AND FIRESIDE appears an interesting article on the training of champion chickens. Following is an extract:

"Of course, with costly prize fowls every care and attention must be bestowed upon them. Once a 'topper' goes amiss, it means a loss of many, many dollars, especially if in the middle of the hatching season. The number of shows held yearly the world over makes the general exhibitor's life very interesting. The judge will seldom stop to even look at a bird if wild in the pen. The bird will not then allow herself to be handled or even show off her 'points.' The exhibitor has therefore, to put his birds into training-quarters about two weeks before the show. The bird is caged up in an ordinary wire pen, as used at the shows, specially fed with choice titbits and stroked with the hand and a judging-stick or twig, till quite tame."

"Lined is given to put a gloss on the plumage. The bird is then occasionally handled, preferably at night, when such live stock seem somewhat stupefied. The owner must pass the stick up the breast and throat, causing the bird to hold its head up. In the case of birds requiring length of limb, titbits are held up high and the bird made to stretch for them."

"Fancier friends are called in to discuss aloud the qualities of the bird and walk around the pen to get the exhibit accustomed to noises encountered at the shows. Strict attention is paid to cleanliness. Dark-colored birds are ideal for novices, as they require but little preparation after training. Gently pass a large silk handkerchief slightly dampened over the bird, in the same direction as the feathers grow, to remove all surface dirt from the plumage. Wrap a soft towel around the bird's back, and hold its legs in warm water; then gently scrub the legs with a nail-brush and a good lathering soap. Wash the face, comb and wattles, and apply a little vaseline or olive-oil to render the head-points a brilliant red, which denotes perfect condition."

A Governor Who Trusts Convicts.

In the "Interesting People" department of the January American Magazine appears an article about Governor Oswald West of Oregon, who likes to trust men. He let a life-term murderer out of prison long enough to earn money to pay off a mortgage on his father-in-law's home, the money having been spent to hire lawyers to defend him. Following is an extract: "Out in Oregon there is a governor who believes in men—even though they have sinned against society and have been committed to the keeping of the penal institutions of the State. Oswald West believes in men to such an extent that sixty-two per cent. of the prisoners serving in the Oregon State penitentiary are out 'on honor' as it is called. A considerable number of these are out earning an honest living outside the prison walls, entirely independent of any prison discipline or oversight. The rest are 'trusties' working for the State at other public institutions, or building roads with out being guarded—frequently one or two hundred miles away from the prison, and often in thinly settled portions of the country where escape would be comparatively easy. And yet fewer prisoners try to get away under this system than in the old days when the guards stood by armed with repeating Winchester."

The High Cost of Gasoline

J. Earl Clauson hints at an interesting solution for the above-mentioned evil in his illuminating (not a pun) article in OTTIE for January:

Even at an equal price per gallon, light-weight gasoline is a much more expensive fuel than either heavy-weight oil or kerosene. The heat values of both are nearly constant pound for pound. Gallon for gallon they diverge widely. A gallon of gasoline of eighty-five specific gravity yields 102,980 heat units and costs upwards of twenty cents, if obtainable at all. A gallon of kerosene yields 124,450 heat units and costs well under ten cents. "Kerosene is the most economical fuel figuratively," declared F. H. Floyd, speaking before the American Society of Automobile Engineers: "it should prove also the most economical fuel actually as soon as the carburetor is perfected which will handle it."

Forcing Women Suffragists to Eat.

In the January "Woman's Home Companion" appears an interesting account of the violent campaign that has been carried on in England. Many women have been put in prison and while there have refused to eat. These tactics on the part of the women have been called "The Hungry Strike." Where the women have refused to eat until they have become weak, their discharge from prison has usually resulted. In some cases, as for example the following, prisoners have been forced to eat:

"Jane Wharton, a poor seamstress, was arrested for smashing a prison window. She was committed, and after several days of starvation was forcibly fed. Her teeth were forced apart by a steel instrument, and a rubber tube was pushed into the mouth, down the alimentary tract, and into the stomach. The hands and feet were of course bound, and several officers had to hold the captive in position while the doctors pumped down the gruel. This produces violent nausea and the thrusting in and withdrawing of the tube causes intense pain.

"Day after day this was continued, sometimes the nostrils being made to hold the tube instead of the mouth, until the prisoner was seriously weakened. A cursory examination was given when violent shivering set in; but the heart was pronounced perfectly sound, and the forced feeding went on."

Folly of De Lesseps.

Surely no great engineering work was ever undertaken in a more jocund spirit than Ferdinand de Lesseps exhibited when he entered upon his second task as world's chief canal-builder. His success with the Suez Canal seemed to have turned his head so completely that all obstacles were virtually invisible to him. He was the first promoter of the age, the flamboyant collector of capital under whose seductive appeals all French purses flew open. Had he been an engineer his appeals would necessarily have been deprived of that appearance of boundless confidence, that jaunty disregard of difficulties, which made them so attractive and so nearly irresistible to his own people. If he saw obstacles he refused to take cognizance of them. When trained engineers called his attention to them, he pushed them aside as unworthy of serious attention. He had cut a sea-level canal through the Isthmus of Suez; he would cut a sea-level canal through Isthmus of Panama.

Waterway Methods Behind Times.

The American who travels in Europe is impressed with the antiquated type of boats which ply our American rivers writes Huber Bruce Fuller in January "Century." On the Mississippi, for example, the stern-wheel river packets of the type prevalent before the Civil War are still in use. Half a century has brought no improvement. The contrast is all the more masked by comparison with wonderful improvements in the railroad world—steel freight cars the enormous high speed engines, the rock ballast roadbeds. In Europe we see on all the rivers and canals steel barges in enormous tows. On the Rhine, the most famous inland water route of the world, from six to ten of these barges, loaded with such freight as coal, iron ore and grain, constitute a single tow. These barges have a capacity of from 1,000 to 1,500 tons each. On the German canals the barges are frequently propelled by electric motor cars running on tracks parallel to the canals. In the United States steel barges are propelled by horses or mules.—H. B. Fuller in January "Century."

The Golden Northwest of China.

China, like the United States, has "a Golden Northwest," in which wheat is the principal crop. The Provinces of Honan, Shensi and Shansi, with some fifty millions of inhabitants, lie almost entirely within that wonderful "Loess Belt," which is covered with a brownish-yellow loam, coating the mountains, hills, valleys and plains, to a depth varying from a few yards to hundreds of feet. It seems to be a very fine sand, full of organic remains, and especially with numerous thin tubes of carbonate of lime, which make the undisturbed loess extremely solid.

Too porous for the cultivation of rice, it becomes with plenty of rain or irrigation one of the most productive soils in the world. No fertilizers are needed, and when the wheat crop is cut, the farmer spreads a little fresh loess over the stubble, plows it in, and plants his fall crop, thus securing throughout the belt two crops every year.

In Honan the chief winter crops are wheat, barley, peas, beans, sweet potatoes and rape seed for oil. There follow cotton, millet, maize, beans and hemp; while many fruits, berries, nuts, etc., are raised for home use. The immense fields of the opium-bearing poppy once raised in these provinces have been almost stamped out by recent laws, and cotton and wheat have increased accordingly, especially along the new Pei-Han railway and since the building of the modern roller flouring mills at Hahkow and Shanghai.—"The Golden Northwest of China," Franklin Dent, in National Magazine for January.

What They Knew of Luther.

"Of the painful lack of general information shown by the college student, one instance will suffice. In a written test (whether in a college for young men or women is immaterial), the question was asked: 'What was the secret of Luther's success as a reformer?' The question was left unanswered by the majority of the class. Some frankly avowed they did not know who Luther was. Some confounded the name with that of Luther Burbank. One answer, which greatly horrified the professors was this: 'The secret of Luther's success was his diet of worms.'"—Suburban Life for January.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cherry sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

THE PASTEUR TREATMENT

STATEMENT OF BOARD OF POOR DIRECTORS.

Question as to the Liability of Poor District for the Full Treatment.

I am asked, as attorney to the Directors of the Poor, to state, for public information, the position of the Board of Directors relative to requests for aid under the provisions of the act of Assembly of 1907 which reads as follows:

"That in each and every county of this Commonwealth it shall be the duty of the proper officers of the several poor districts, respectively, to provide all persons who may apply for aid in their said several districts, who may be bitten by dogs or other animals suffering from hydrophobia, or rabies, with the proper medical attention to prevent the development of the disease in the person or persons so bitten, which medical attention may include the treatment known as the Pasteur treatment."

The only judicial utterance construing this act and passing on the question of its constitutionality is an opinion by Judge McConnell, of Westmoreland county, in Mosey vs. Directors of Home for Destitute, in which it is held that it is unconstitutional, being in violation of Art. 3rd, Sec. 18, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania prohibiting appropriations for private purposes.

Because of this opinion, and particularly in cases in which the demand for payment for treatment is not supported by proper legal proceedings, I advise the Directors of the Poor that there is a question as to the liability of the poor district. Should the act prove to be unconstitutional no obligation would rest on the Directors of the Poor, nor would there be any right in them, to make payment of claims presented under its provisions.

It is further required by law that certain forms must be observed if liability is to be imposed on the poor district. An order of relief must be issued by a justice of the peace, after hearing and adjudication of the facts, prior to the performance of the service for which payment is demanded except in cases of emergency; an order by one justice of the peace being sufficient in Adams county under a special act, although the signatures of two magistrates are necessary under the general law of the State.

In Kochonour vs. Cumberland County Poor District it is held that the poor district is not liable for expenses incurred in treatment in a hospital for hydrophobia, unless application was made to the directors before the patient was placed in its charge.

It will thus be seen that there is uncertainty as to the act in question, and that even if there was no doubt definite procedure would be required in enforcing it.

If the act is constitutional, those of our citizens who are so unfortunate as to be bitten by an animal suffering from rabies should have every benefit it affords, but if it is unconstitutional there is no warrant in law for payment for treatment under its terms from the public funds.

Representing the Directors of the Poor I feel that the question should have early determination by the Court of our own county and by the courts of last resort if necessary.

C. E. STAHL.

State Educational Association.

The sixty third annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Educational Association, which began at Harrisburg on last Thursday, was declared to be the greatest gathering of educators ever held in that city and was attended by more school teachers than any previous meeting.

Dr. J. George Becht, president of the Association, made the opening address on Thursday morning.

Dr. Becht in his address reviewed the struggle for educational advantages, citing the conditions of early days when to enter a free school meant confession of abject poverty and the public school as it is known today throughout the Commonwealth founded by William Penn, was regarded as a dream of theorists.

President Becht said in his opening address:

"The years since 1834 when the general system of education by common school was inaugurated, have been fraught with valiant and hard endeavor in the interests of universal education. Every forward step has been met with determined opposition: and no matter what the nature of the advance nor how well founded its purpose, ignorance, indifference, inertia and superstition were aroused, sounded a challenge and stood ready to dispute the way. Every measure looked toward the spread of universal education that has been placed upon the statute books, has had to face the fire of a vigorous and relentless opposition. The extension of the school term from three to seven months, the provisions for extended supervision in city and county: the free text book law: the minimum salary act: the law providing for medical inspection, not to speak of a hundred other progressive measures, because a few heroic souls appeared at each crisis, who having breadth of vision and courage born of conviction gave themselves over to the task of enlarging and extending educational opportunities so that the full educational advantages might be brought to the poorest child of the meaghest hut of the mountains."

"The growth of the system has been marvelous in spite of its opposition and today we have a code of school law which has been characterized by a great authority as one that sweeps away the outward anomalies of its old organization and places it in the front rank for simplicity, uniformity and comprehensiveness."

Dr. Becht said that after the present Christmas vacation 1,500,000 school children, 35,000 teachers and 250 supervisory officers will be in the schools. Because of this miracle of development, said he, great responsibility has been laid upon the school. "It is called upon to teach all of the household arts from baking pies to stuffing chickens and tending babies. It must teach its pupils to run typewriters and turning lathes and to perform a thousand and one operations met within daily life. It is expected to be the guardian of the child's morals and manners and to indicate in him the virtues of honor, truth, sobriety, prudence, thrift, punctuality and patience so that it shall never, never go astray," said he. "These demands are unusually heavy, but the school will rise to its opportunities and meet its responsibilities. Throughout the history of the State the school has stood as the great conservator of the people's life, through the care exercised in behalf of the people's children and notwithstanding the fact that recently a frantic cry has been uttered by a few despicable souls that the public school is the most momentous failure in American life, still it stands in the heart and mind of the people as the great inspiration of American life and American character and holds its place of honor nearest the flag."

Declaring "the welfare of all the children of all the people is the central theme" in education as in everything pertaining to law, Dr. Becht made a plea for earnest work by educators.

In closing the president said: "Looking to the future, two things seem to be of transcendent importance to our system. First, the equalization of educational opportunities by means of additional appropriations to those districts which cannot provide adequately for themselves. The center of wealth and population can readily provide for themselves, but in many of the rural communities the inhabitants receive small return on their investments and consequently can not provide such opportunities as ought to be given to the children of suburban communities. The distribution of such special aid is a matter of administration but the public needs to realize that the State has a duty to perform in providing funds for such equalization. Again looking to the future Pennsylvania must make amends for past prodigality and much wastefulness of natural resources by providing for a permanent State school fund."

Hamiltonban Educational Meeting.

The third educational meeting of the teachers of Hamiltonban township was held at West Fairfield school, J. Harry Pecher teacher, on Friday evening the 20th. The meeting was opened by the president Wilson Hummelbaugh in the chair followed by the reading of the minutes.

The following teachers were present: Clara Moore, Alma Slonaker, Harry Pecher, Chas. Frey, Ethel McCreary, Stella Linn, W. F. Watson and Anna Landis.

There was an unusually large crowd present, fully as many standing outside as there were inside of the building. Good order prevailed and excellent attention manifested throughout the entire exercises. There were recitations and songs rendered by the school. Music was furnished by the Orchestra. Discussion, "At what age should Algebra be taught?" by Stella Linn and Chas. Frey; Debate, "Resolved that suffrage should be extended to women," affirmative John Pecher, and Wilson Hummelbaugh; negative, J. Harry Pecher and W. F. Watson. The judges were: Messrs. J. A. Spangler, Robert Sanders and Martin Baker. The judges after listening to the brilliant speeches on both sides and which were greatly applauded by the audience decided in favor of the negative 2 to 1.

The teacher, Harry Pecher, allows nothing undone to make such a meeting entertaining and a success. Collection $2.15.

SECRETS OF THE UNDERWORLD

Witness in Becker Case Writes Series of Articles on New York's Criminals

For the first time the country is going to have a clear view of the "seamy side" of New York life—the vast ramifications of graft and crime of which a glimpse was seen in the trials of Police Lieutenant Becker and the four gunmen who killed Rosenthal.

These revelations will be made in a series of articles, entitled "My Life in the Underworld," which will appear in the Philadelphia North American on successive Sundays, beginning next Sunday, December 29.

The author is Jack Rose—"Bald" Jack Rose, the gambler, who for twenty years has been familiar with every noted inhabitant of the strange world of which he writes. It was his astounding testimony that sent Becker and the assassins to the death house in Sing Sing.

Rose will "take the lid off" the underworld of New York, and reveal the astonishing life led by its denizens, the thousands who live by crime or by their wits.

A Modest Hero.

A French reporter encountered in a little village of the south of France a gardener who wore, pinned on his clean Sunday blouse, the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. Naturally the newspaper man desired to know how he got it. The gardener, who, like many of his trade, seemed to be a silent man, was averse to meeting an old and wearisome demand, but finally he began:

"Oh, I don't know how I did get it! I was at Bazelles with the rest of the battery. All the officers were killed; then down went all the noncommissioned officers—bang, bang, bang! By and by all the soldiers went down but me. I had fired the last shot and naturally was doing what I could to keep off the Bavarians."

"Well, a general came, and says he 'Where's your officers?'"

"'All down,' says I."

"Where's your gunners?" says he.

"'All down but me,' says I."

"And you've been fighting here all alone?" says he.

"I couldn't let 'em come and get the guns, could I?" I says, and then he up and put this ribbon on me, probably because there was nobody else there to put it on."

Too Obliging.

When a Sixth avenue elevated train reached the Twenty-third street station an elderly and poorly dressed woman arose and walked slowly toward the door. She had reached the platform and was about to step off when a man noticed that she had left a paper parcel behind. "Hey! You forgot something," he shouted, but the woman never turned about. He jumped off the car and reached the woman's side as the gate banged and the train moved on. "Much obliged, but that isn't mine," said the woman. A sickly smile overspread the man's face as he said to the people who had witnessed the refusal of the parcel, "She's right; it belongs to me." And seeing that some of the witnesses were incredulous, he said that the parcel contained a child's rubber coat, proving it by opening the parcel. He then joined in the laugh on himself.—New York Tribune.

Rope or Rifle.

The first legal execution by shooting to be carried out by civil authorities in America was at Salt Lake City in 1861, when William Cockroft, convicted of murder in the first degree, chose to be shot rather than hanged or beheaded.

Under the laws of the territory of Utah a condemned man was permitted to select either of the three methods of his taking off, and when Utah became a state the choice was restricted to shooting or hanging. Of the executions in Utah in the last century only one man, a wife murderer, has chosen the noose. Utah was long the only American state that permitted an assassin any choice as to his means of exit from the world, but a few years ago Nevada passed a law giving a condemned man the option of the rope or the rifle.—Baltimore News.

Sir Boyle Roche's Bulls.

Sir Boyle Roche earned the distinction of being the father of Irish bulls. Here are one or two of his remarks. "Why," he once said, "should we beggar ourselves to benefit posterity? What has posterity done for us?" adding, "By posterity I mean those who come after us."

At a political meeting he remarked that he would "not rest satisfied until the rocky mountains of Ireland became cultivated valleys," and on another occasion, "All along the untrodden paths of the future I can see the footprints of an unseen hand." The most popular and best quoted bull and one which must always be allied with his name is, "A man could not be in two places at the same time unless he were a bird."

Drinking of Healths.

The drinking of healths in wine or liquor or other kinds originated in Britain at the time of the rule of the Danes, before Alfred the Great finally succeeded in driving them from the land. Owing to the assassination of Englishmen by the Danes, it became a custom to enter into compacts for the mutual preservation of health and security. These compacts were usually pledged in wine, and hence the custom of drinking healths.—London Standard.

"Oh, Harold," said Mrs. Newlywed, "a strange man was here today, and he said he wished to read our gas meter."

"Well, did you let him in?"

He Liked Them Cooked.

There was a Frenchman who hated the country as much as did Charles Lamb, but he expressed his feelings in few words. This was Charles Monselet, who lived on the Quai Voltaire, Paris. "It is," he said, referring to the country, "the place where the birds are raw."

Status of Lincoln Way.

The fate of the Lincoln Way is undetermined. Yet it does not look rosy with hope at the present time. Mr. Slayden, chairman of the Library Committee on last Thursday, the first session after the holidays, renewed his motion in the House at Washington that the Lincoln monument memorial concurrent resolution from the Senate be withdrawn from the committee on appropriations to which it was sent and sent to the committee on the Library. By reason of the House adjourning as a mark of respect to the memory of Hon. John G. McHenry, late a representative from Pennsylvania, the motion of Mr. Slayden went over until Friday morning.

At that time the motion was called on. Mr. Boland asked that five minutes be unanimously given to Mr. Slayden to make an explanation and that he be allowed five minutes in which to reply. This was not agreed to and the question was taken and point of no quorum being raised a roll call on the question was ordered and resulted in ayes 102, nays 90, and 5 answering present, and 190 not voting. Over 160 of the latter were paired.

It is said that quite a number voted who are in favor of the Highway but thought the matter should be taken from the Library Committee. The advocates of the Lincoln Way have always claimed a decided majority for the Lincoln Way, and the vote would indicate a possibility of still obtaining it. When Committee on Library reports the concurrent resolution back to the House, the real fate of the Highway will be fought out and determined.

Third Person to be Bitten by Dog.

Hiram Thomas of Butler township, left on last Wednesday for Marietta to take the Pasteur treatment by reason of being bitten in the hand by a dog. Mr. Thomas on Monday evening, Dec. 23, went to home of a neighbor and as he entered the house a shepherd dog snapped at him, biting him in the hand. The dog had been acting queer and was penned up and three days later died. The head of the dog was sent by Dr. E. D. Hudson to the State laboratories at Philadelphia, and on Tuesday of last week received telegram that dog had died of rabies. The wound of Mr. Thomas became painful on Sunday, Dec. 29, and as soon as word came of the fact that dog had rabies, he prepared to go to Marietta.

Mr. Thomas is the third person to be bitten by a mad dog and compelled to take the Pasteur treatment and there is much concern over the situation throughout the territory where they occurred and every dog is being watched.

Educational Rally.

One of the three educational rallies of the school year will be held in East Berlin on Friday and Saturday of this week, Jan. 10th and 11th. Teachers who expect to be in attendance should write to Prof. J. W. Bucher, East Berlin. The citizens of East Berlin will entertain the teachers at luncheon Saturday noon.

The rally will unquestionably be one of great inspiration to the teachers, as they will be addressed by Prof. P. M. Harbold of Millersburg State Normal School and by Prof. C. F. Sanders of Gettysburg College.

The Danger of Lying in Bed.

Lack of muscular exercise is the first result of lying in bed. As a result the appetite is weakened, the digestive action slows down and the muscles of the stomach and abdomen cease to act upon the intestinal mass. When the body is in a recumbent position the heart works with the least expenditure of effort and the least fatigue and the circulation and the functional activity are decreased. But unless the subject is exceptionally vigorous all the benefits are counterbalanced by dangers. In bed the subject is shut away from fresh air and sunlight. The result of that deprivation is a condition similar to anemia. But the supreme menace to the weak or the aged confined to bed is the clogging of the pulmonary circulation, an action which frequently results in passive congestion of both sides of the lungs. For this reason the simple fracture of a bone may be the cause of death, because when the patient lies in bed there is no movement of the muscles to act as an incentive to deep breathing.—Harper's.

The Aristocratic Montenegrin.

The Bulgarian may not have a liking for domestic service, but he is a born agricultural laborer. According to a recent traveler, if you give him a barren piece of land he will make it blossom like the rose, while his Montenegrin brother will stand and look on. On the other hand, the Montenegrin placed in a drawing room always behaves like a gentleman, while the Bulgarian in the same environment cannot help being a boor. "But then," says the London Chronicle, "it is said the Montenegrins are the descendants of Serbian aristocrats who fled to the mountains to seek freedom. The explanation is thin, but pleasing. Of one claim to culture, however, Montenegro cannot be deprived—she established a printing press at Obod only twenty years after Caxton began his labors, and she printed beautifully. But the Turks made 'pil' of everything, and the press was not re-established till 1832."

The Drunkard's Cloak.

One of the quaint instruments of torture in England in olden time was a device known as the drunkard's cloak. It was made of wood and in shape resembled a huge inverted flowerpot. Through the small circular aperture in the top was thrust the neck of the imprisoned inebriate. The weight of this ancient counterpart of the straitjacket fell on the victim's shoulders and was sufficient to make every bone in his body ache. With his hands practically pinned to his sides and the garment reaching almost to the ground the only motion allowed him was a slow shuffle of his weary feet as he dragged his way painfully along. One can well believe that any one who had been compelled to don the drunkard's cloak would be very apt to come to the conclusion that a high old time was not worth having at the price.

Rivaroli's Wit.

Antoine Rivaroli, the French epigrammatist of the eighteenth century, was so brilliant that something good was expected of him every minute. Once when he had been invited to dinner, at which the hostess especially wished him to shine, he sat quite silent. The attitude of disappointed expectancy in the company nettled him, and at last Rivaroli made a stupid remark. Everybody uttered an exclamation.

"There," said Rivaroli, "I cannot say a stupid thing without every one's crying 'Thief!'"

At a dinner in the house of some Germans he made a joke. His hosts put their heads together inquiringly. Rivaroli said to his neighbor, a Frenchman:

"Look at the Germans pooling their wits to understand a joke."

Nests on the Water.

It is almost unthinkable that a bird should build a nest on the water. Yet that is exactly what the grebes always do. With reeds, grass and plant stems the grebe makes a regular floating island, somewhat hollowed out on top, usually near the open water of a marshy or reedy lake. We have several kinds of grebes, but their nests are much alike, sometimes moored to the reeds, but usually floating freely on the water.—St. Nicholas.

Professor of class in composition—

Some one in the class recently referred to a woman as of "medium size."

BALLOON No. 7

It Clears Away the Cloud

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Maisie Pomeroy dismissed her pupils and locked the door of the little school-house. It lacked three days of the long vacation, and the last hours of the school year dragged heavily, for June weather was insistently calling. Her homeward walk led along pleasant country lanes and through clover fields crisscrossed with narrow footpaths.

In Maisie's pocket was her last month's salary, and in spite of June weather and the calling bobolink her heart was heavy with disappointment, though her face wore its usual expression of untroubled sweetness. Just the amount of that month's salary would take her to a large summer resort, where she might have two weeks of such enjoyment as she had never known in her monotonous life. She had read of the pleasures of this city by the sea, she had known girls whose parents were well-to-do to spend several months there, and now Ella Shaw had written to say they were going and wished Maisie to join them. It was to be "Dutch treat," and she knew that meant each girl was to pay her own expenses.

She had not even mentioned the matter to her mother, for she knew that their resources were badly strained this year. There was an uncle who had been bedridden for two years, and they were now maintaining his declining days in the hospital, where he could be best cared for. As Maisie was the only wage earner in their family of two, it was important—prohibitive, rather—that not one penny be wasted.

"If Bloomfield were not so dull," she murmured wistfully. "Ever since I can remember there has never been any unusual happening here. No new families ever move here, and nobody ever marries anybody that lives farther than Fairmount. I don't wonder there are so many maiden ladies in this village!" She smiled as she pushed open the front gate, for there on the front piazza sat her mother, dispensing cake and root beer, to five of Bloomfield's spinsters. Some day she, too, would form one of a similar group.

"Lots of news, Maisie," cried Emma Risley as the girl sat down on the top step and sipped a glass of the cool beverage.

"News?" repeated Maisie; then she added quickly: "Oh, you mean the new flagpole in front of the town hall? I saw that yesterday."

"No, indeed; that's old! What do you think is going to happen in Bloomfield?" Emma was bursting with importance, and the four other spinsters nodded their heads significantly.

"A circus?" There were painfully few things that ever had happened in Bloomfield, and Maisie's imagination was starved.

"No, sir! What do you think of balloon races here?" Miss Risley's voice was triumphant.

"Balloon races?" echoed Maisie blankly.

"Ten balloons all starting at once from Cabot's big hayfield!"

"When is it going to be?" asked Maisie.

"In three weeks. The men have been here and looked over the grounds, and the lumber is on the way. All the rooms at the hotel have been engaged for the workmen. You see, I knew about it the first one because I hold a first mortgage on Cabot's big field," explained Emma Risley importantly, "and Joshua Cabot spoke to me about the matter."

When they had chatted themselves away Maisie and her mother sat on the piazza until the sun went down. They talked about the coming of the balloonists and how it had been learned that Bloomfield was chosen because of some special advantage it possessed for the purpose, and everybody said that once the city excursionists saw what a beautiful spot Bloomfield really was there would start an influx of summer boarders and possibly a land boom.

"Mother, dear," half sighed Maisie, "I was complaining this very afternoon of the dullness here, and as I walked home through Cabot's field I was wishing almost anything would happen to break the monotony. Now that something is going to happen I am feeling sorry about the clover fields. They are so beautiful!"

Mrs. Pomeroy laughed softly and caressed her daughter's bronze hair. "That's the way with all of us, my dear. I have known for a long time that you were weary of the monotony of your life, and I cannot blame you. When I was a girl somehow we seemed to get more out of life even if we never went away from the village. There were parties every week and socials and spelling classes and skit parties. The winter was always so short for all the good times we had. Nowadays the girls and young men go away to the cities, and those that remain and marry here don't seem to care for the old simple pleasures."

"Perhaps after the balloon races are over we will rejoice in our old time quiet. But somehow I would like to have just a taste of life and pleasure before"—Maisie flushed and bit her lip.

"Refore what, dear?"

"I know I'm horrid, mother, but I was going to say before I settled down into a regulation Bloomfield old maid," cried the girl, biding her face in her mother's lap.

Mrs. Pomeroy smiled indulgently. "You are sure of that, Maisie? Did you tell Walter Avery never to come back to Bloomfield?"

For a long time Maisie was silent. Then she threw up her head and tossed the straying locks from her flushed cheeks. Her brown eyes were very bright.

"I told him things that I am sure he will never forgive," she said slowly. "I said I would never marry a Bloomfield boy and settle down into a humdrum existence. I said I could never think of him seriously; that every time I looked at him he seemed to be the same chubby faced, apple cheeked little boy I went to school with years ago."

"What did Walter say to that?" Mrs. Pomeroy's face was grave, though her brown eyes were shining, too, and they looked much like Maisie's.

"He didn't say anything. He just nodded his head in that awkward way of his and went off. The next I heard he was in New York studying to be a doctor. You know he has never been home since." Maisie's tone was unconsciously wistful.

The days before the great event that was to transform Bloomfield from a sleepy country village into a fashionable rendezvous for a day were filled with preparations for the balloon races. As if by magic all the daisies in Cabot's field were laid to the ground and grand stands were erected and huge gas tanks put in place. School was ended, and Maisie walked in other directions when she chose to be outdoors. Now, she only remembered Cabot's field as the place where Walter had met her one day and confessed his love among the daisies, which are supposed never to tell lovers' secrets.

Maisie was disturbed by these memories that forced themselves upon her. She did not wish to think of Walter Avery, and she had dismissed him from her mind for four years and resented that she could not banish him from her memory. She felt sure that out there in the big world there was waiting for her an ideal lover, handsome, courtly, polished, rich.

At last came Bloomfield's great day. The road to Cabot's field was black with vehicles of every description. By 10 o'clock every seat in the stands was filled, and the four sides of the great field were lined with carriages, motor-cars and farm wagons. Maisie and her mother were there and by good fortune and the kind offices of Emma Risley had secured front row seats in one of the stands. Ten big balloons swayed slowly, tugging at their anchor ropes. There were a smell of escaping gas, the music of a band and the sound of many voices. Maisie found herself enjoying the excitement. If this was life she would like a taste of it!

Emma Risley leaned across Maisie and spoke to Mrs. Pomeroy. "I hear Walter Avery's going up in one of the balloons. You know he's quite an amateur balloonist. Mrs. Avery is worried almost to death about it."

"Ballooning is a dangerous sport," returned Mrs. Pomeroy's calm voice, "but I suppose Walter finds it a relaxation from his professional work."

"I guess he deserves all the fun he gets. They say he worked like a Trojan to get his degree, and now he's to go in partnership with a city doctor." Emma Risley sat back in her seat. "There, they're off, Maisie! I wonder which is Walter's balloon. Let me see your program—No. 7 (that's a lucky number, anyway). Dr. Avery! Isn't that funny? Seems as if I could see Walter as he was when he came to school to me years ago. Think of his being a doctor!"

Maisie was thinking entirely too much for her own good. She was thoroughly frightened at the idea of Walter Avery's ascension in the balloon. She could see No. 7 now. That was Walter, tall, slender, supple of form, his dark hair blowing back from his forehead. He was looking their way. Was he looking at her? She told herself that he could merely see the crowd of white faces; that he could not pick out individuals. Still he stared, and then, just as the anchors were cast adrift and he started up, he waved a handkerchief toward them. Suddenly Maisie's little handkerchief broke into a fluttering signal. The fresh breeze tore it from her hand, and it whirled upward with balloon No. 7.

Walter leaned out, deftly caught the bit of white, tucked it in his breast and amid the cheers of the crowd went up to an altitude that caused hearts to throb and cheeks to pale with apprehension. When the last ship had become a mere speck in the sky the crowd dispersed in all directions and Maisie and her mother went home. It would be late in the afternoon before the balloons again be sighted on the return trip, provided they were not driven before adverse winds. Then their return would be an event indeed. There was an excellent chance that some of them would never come back.

Maisie Pomeroy never forgot that waiting time. In those hours died all the foolish longing and discontentment that had possessed her. There was only one thing she craved, and that was the life of Walter Avery, whether he loved her now or not. She knew that she loved him.

With the evening came the return of the balloonists, every one safe, Walter Avery winning the second prize, which he did not care a fig for, because a greater prize awaited him in Mrs. Pomeroy's old fashioned garden. Bloomfield is a thriving suburb now, and life there is by no means dull and commonplace. The balloon ground is now a baseball field.

Tombstone Amid Waves.

Americans by the thousand visit Mont St. Michel every year, there to explore the famous old monastery and feast on the renowned omelets of Mme. Poularde, and most of them tarry en route at St. Malo, the gay watering place on the Brittany coast, whose grim past is recalled by the fortifications by which it is begirt. Chateaubriand, the father of French romanticism, is buried at St. Malo, and no true American sightseer fails to pay a visit to his tomb, nameless, which at high tide is covered by the sea. Jules Lamaitre in a work on "the great egotist," as he calls Chateaubriand, tells how the author bargained with the mayor of St. Malo for the grant of a rock whereon to plant his tomb, which, he stipulated, was to be a simple stone with a cross, without a name, amid the waves. "He was bent," says Chateaubriand's latest biographer, "on astonishing the world, even when he could no longer be by to enjoy the effect. There was vanity in his very skeleton."—New York Press.

Hung by an Expert.

The box car nomad wiped the last lingering pie crumbs from his lips with a grimy coat sleeve and dragged his reluctant feet over to where the scythe was. His whole nature revolted against touching the thing, but he had his part of the contract to fulfill. Besides, the farmer was watching. With the scythe in his hands he advanced cautiously toward the battle array of iron weeds in the fence corner and made three or four half hearted swipes at them.

Then he rested the hated blade on the ground and called to the farmer.

"Say, boss, this scythe ain't hung right."

"Well," was the retort "hang it to suit yourself."

Whereupon the bobo hung it upon a convenient sapling and departed hastily in the direction of the railroad track.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Right—Try It!

Get up right in the morning. Go to bed right at night. Start with joy in your heart, hope in the future, kindness in your purpose.

If it is a dark day, never mind; you will lighten it up. If it is a bright day, you will add to the brightness. Give a word of cheer, a kindly greeting and a warm handshake to your friends.

If you have enemies, look up, pass them by, forget and try to forgive.

If all of us would only think how much of human happiness is made by ourselves there would be less of human misery.

If all of us would bear in mind that happiness is from within and not from without there would be a wellspring of joy in every heart and the sun would shine forever.

Try it.—John A. Schleicher in Leslie's.

This Was Made in Germany.

In a second class compartment on a German train in which a gentleman is seated enters a woman with a box of cheese. A very strong odor soon pervades the compartment, and the gentleman becomes restless.

"Oh, pardon me, sir," says the woman. "I'm taking my husband a box of Limburger cheese; he is so fond of it, and where we are in the country none can be bought. The smell is quite harmless."

"Don't mention it!" replies the man. As the odor becomes stronger he lights a cigarette.

"Excuse me," speaks up the woman, "this is not a compartment for smoking. As for myself, I would gladly stand the smoke, but the cheese will draw the odor of tobacco."—Fliegende Blätter.

His Name and Profession.

When Alfonso XIII. of Spain was in the grip of his earliest moping fever his car was not always recognized, and so he had some amusing experiences. At Bayonne he was once "held up" by a gendarme, who requested him to show his driving license.

"I have not got one," replied the king. "Then," rejoined the gendarme, "I shall have to summon you. Your name, address and profession?" "Alfonso de Bourbon, king of Spain. Palace Miramar, S. Sebastian," was the reply.

Tableau—"The Passes of the Pyrenees."

Taking Him Down.

"What reason have you to think my daughter loves you?"

"She says she is willing to make any sacrifice for me."

"That's no sign she loves you."

"What is it, then?"

"An indication that she's crazy."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Psychological Study.

"What makes you think that man has a melancholy disposition? His remarks are always highly optimistic."

"That's the point," replied Miss Cayenne. "Only a person of melancholy tendencies would have to go to so much pains to cheer himself up."—Washington Star.

Piling It On.

"Thompson's cow got into my garden and ate all the grass off the lawn."

"What did he do?"

"Sent me a bill for using his cow as a lawn mower."

Superscience.

Modern science is that practical knowledge of truth that urges us to feel an oyster's pulse and look at its tongue before we eat it.—Galveston News.

The charity that hastens to proclaim its good deeds ceases to be charity and is only pride and ostentation.—Huntton.

How Moose Jaw Got Its Name.

"Moose Jaw is a strange name for a city, and it may be of interest to know how such a name was given. Some fifty years ago, so the story goes, a pioneer with his team of oxen and "prairie schooner," while passing along the banks of the river, was obliged to camp at this point, in Saskatchewan, on account of an accident to his cart as a spoke had fallen out during the day, and the wheel was falling apart. He looked around for something to insert for a temporary brace for the wheel, while his wife busied herself with the evening meal. The pioneer's child, while romping around, found the jawbone of a moose, which she held up to her father, who by this time almost despaired of finding something with which to mend his wagon, and was delighted to find that the jawbone exactly fitted the place of the missing spoke. The Indians thereafter named this part of the river "The Place Where the White Man Found the Moose Jaw." This accounts for the town's unforgettable name.—London Standard.

An Extensive Shave.

When Salmon P. Chase was a school-boy at Worthington, O., he was one day left at home with orders to kill and dress a pig while Bishop Chase and most of the older members of the family were gone. In telling of this experience he wrote in an old letter:

"I had no trouble in catching and slaughtering a fat young porker. I had the tub of water all ready for plunging him in, preparatory to taking off his bristles. Unfortunately, however, the water was too hot, or perhaps when I scalded the pig I kept him in too long. At any rate, when I undertook to remove the bristles I couldn't start one of them. They were set! But that pig had to be dressed. I bethought me of my cousin's razor—a new one, just purchased by that spruce young clergyman. No sooner said than done! I got the razor and shaved the pig from tail to snout."

This is undoubtedly one of the most extensive shaves on record.

What Rules the World.

Many years ago John Brougham, Lester Wallace, Artemus Ward and others used to meet after the play at Windhurst's, in Park row, in New York. One night the question, "What rules the world?" arose, and various opinions were expressed. William Ross Wallace, who was present, retired before long and some time later called Thomas J. Leigh from the room and handed to him a poem which he had just written. Mr. Leigh read it aloud to the company, and Mr. Brougham made a happy little speech of acknowledgment. The thing was entitled "What Rules the World," and the first stanza ran:

They say that man is mighty,
He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be.
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
And the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

Punishment For a Thief.

"Richard, by the grace of God, king of England. *** If any one cast any reproach or bad word against another or invoke God's malison on him let him for every offense pay an ounce of silver. Let a convicted thief be shorn like a prizefighter, after which let boiling pitch be poured on his head and a feather pillow be shaken over it so as to make him a laughing stock. Then let him be put ashore at the first land where the ships touch. Witness myself at Chinon." These are two of the ordinances of Chinon quoted by Miss Claude M. Holbach in "In the Footsteps of Richard Coeur de Lion."

Sharp Practice.

"I took her home in a taxicab. She asked me to come in and meet her mother. I told the taxicab man to wait. Her mother proved very entertaining."
"Yes."
"The taxicab man waited two hours."
"What's the answer?"
"Why, I found out afterward that her mother was a stockholder in the taxicab company."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Awkwardly Put.

This is one of the things one would rather have put differently: Mr. Hambleup (at fancy dress ball)—I must apologize for coming in ordinary evening dress. Hostess—Well, you really have the advantage of us. We're all looking more foolish than usual, and you're not.—London Punch.

Crushed.

"If I could only die and leave you well off," he said after they had had their first quarrel. "I would be glad to go."

"How," she cruelly asked, "could you die and leave me otherwise than well off?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Rather Harsh.

The famous baritone had been giving his concert and the critic from the country was asked:
"How was the timbre of his voice?"
"Well," said the critic, "it seemed to me to be full of knotholes."—Harper's.

Correct Diagnosis.

Patient—Shall I have to give up beer?
Doctor—No, I shan't forbid it to you. Patient—It's extraordinary. Doctor, what confidence I have in you.—Eligende Blatter.

A Mental Marvel.

Gabe—Has Jones a good memory?
Steve—I should say he has. He can name you the last six vice presidents of the United States.—Cleveland Enquirer.
